

The first and second pairs of radios must be set to channels sufficiently far apart to prevent signal interference. For example, if the first pair of radios are set to channel 1, the second pair should be set to channel 4 (for the Eagle system) or channel 12 (for the Falcon system). It also doubles the normal range for line-of-sight applications.